FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 26, 1882.

The Young Writer's First Production. Probably every one who has attempted authorship will confirm Longfellow's experience on the appearance of his first effusion in print. Nothing, he tells us, which he since published gave him such exquisite pleasure as he experienced on opening the paper to which he had timidly sent his manuscript, and to find it there in actual type, to be read by the multitude. This feeling comes but once, but the memory of it lasts a lifetime. It can never be forgotten. What anticipations it arouses -what a sense of importance it gives! How little does the young author suspect the cold indifferones the young author suspect the con indiner-ence with which it is read, possibly not read, by those who take the paper! As the song says, "It's all the world to him," and why not all to the world? It would be and is cruel to spoil the dehightful sensations of initial authorship. They may be false, they certainly are fleeting, but the enjoyment, while it lasts, is an intoxication of delight, as first pleasant sensations are apt to be. The hint comes soon enough to the writer to discover how really unimportant the event was. If he persists in writing he will come to be as indifferent to his appearance in type as the world is. If a newspaper writer, he will weary of the eternal grind, and forget what he has written the day bebook-maker, either as a newspaper writer or book-maker, either as poet or essayist, however flattering, will ever give to the author the sensation of his first appearance in print. It is sensation of his first appearance in print. tion of his first appearance in print. It is, after it passes, a lost sensation, no more to be repeated than love's young dream, with freshness and fervor. It is an illusion too exquisite to be du-plicated in one's experience. It is our advice, then, to young writers, after they have succeeded in getting into print once, to stop then and there, and cherish the sensation as long as possible— that is to say as long as they can help it—and not repeat it to satiety, or until the spirit is jaded, and the writer ready to cry out, with the Preacher, "all is vanity and vexation of spirit." - Cincinnati Commercial.

Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations without. Hence, to cure the disease the cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure ever be effected. WAR-NER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE is established on just this principle. It realizes that 95 PER CENT.

of all diseases arise from deranged kidneys and liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food the distressing Disorders of Women; for Malaria, and for physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal.
